Red Wings Plan
Use Jud McAtee
DETROIT, Oct. 20.—(CP)—Manager Jack Adams, of Detroit Red Wings, cut three more rookies from his squad Tuesday and announced that he is making plans to use Jud McAtee of Ottawa, Ont., a forward, in games which will play in Toronto and Montreal this season.

The youngsters Adams shared from the roster were Emile Francis, 17-year-old goalkeeper from North Battleford, Sask., Norm Griest, 21-year-old defenseman from Winnipeg, Man., and Bob Robinson, 15-year-old defenseman from Toronto.

In his plans to use McAtee, Adams can count the fiery Ottawa hockeyist only for games played in Canada because he is working in an Ottawa war plant and cannot leave his job for games across the border.

Three Rangers Leave For East
WINNIPEG, Oct. 20.—(CP)—Leader Patrick, manager of the New York Rangers in the National Hockey League, announced today that three players who were attending the club's pre-season training camp here have left for eastern Canada, presumably Windsor, Ont. Patrick did not specify just which players had left the camp, but Bryan Hextall, Phil Gooden and Frank McDonald, three of the most effective Rangers in practice to date, were absent from Monday's workouts.

Commenting on the departure of the three players, Patrick said: "They have left to acclimatize themselves to the playing conditions of eastern Canada. They can skate like blazes here in the dry cold, but down there they slip on wet ice, which isn't so hard."

Full Post-War Program Said Essential Need

Members of the engineering profession have a direct concern in post-war planning and the resources and imagination of architects, conservationists, engineers, town and community planners; in fact, all available technical skill and training, should be enlisted in this effort, declared K. M. Cameron, president, Edmonton branch of the Institution of Mechanical Engineers of Canada, and chief engineer in the Dominion department of public works, in an address delivered to the Edmonton branch of the Institution of Mechanical Engineers last Tuesday evening.

In speaking of the post-war period, Mr. Cameron reminded his listeners of what had happened after the last war. At that time, he said, there had been a boom period of short duration, following which was an equally short period of depression.

PERIOD OF EXPANSION

There then followed an expanding period in the twenties, and crash of values in 1929 and 1930. We were beginning to emerge from a nightmare of unemployment about 1939, when the present war was forced upon us.

The speaker gave facts and figures concerning the three branches of the services—the Army, Navy and Air Force, and their strength before the war and today. Pre-war strength of the three combined was about 120,000; today, they total over 722,000, of whom 20,000 are women.

A questionnaire as to what plans existed met had for the future resulted in 212,423 replies. They had no plans; 14,441 had been promised employment on their discharge, and 142,315 had no promise of post-discharge employment, continued Mr. Cameron.

He went on to say that an estimated 20,000 construction workers were in the armed forces, of whom 27 per cent had been promised work on discharge, and 65 per cent had no promise; 10,000 construction workers are in war factories, war construction or in the armed forces, all of whom have to be found employment when the war ends.

PRESENT MEASURES

Among the measures now in effect as the result of the work by a committee inquiring into the matter of discharged men, are, compulsory re-employment, unemployment insurance, out-of-work benefits, temporary incapacitation, vocational training, pensioning, veterans' land act, preference in employment and others.

"There was remarkable unanimity in the expressed views of representative organizations which have proposed themselves on matters relating to post-war reconstruction," said Mr. Cameron. Almost unanimous was the phrase: "all unemployed men of all ages are able and willing to work."

"Our two main post-war problems," he quoted another speaker as saying, "will be to provide employment for those who can work, and to provide adequate social security for those unable to secure for themselves a minimum standard of subsistence and medical care."

"If we are not ready with a program in all its details—engineering, technical and legal, our whole economy collapses into a state of depression as we had in 1930."

Additional Car Library Stop Is Authorized

Acting on the recommendation of a committee appointed to study the most suitable location for an additional stop for the Library street car, the Library board decided, at a meeting Tuesday night, to have the car stop Thursday nights from six to nine o'clock at the corner of 112 avenue and 58 street.

The board expressed a desire to extend the Library street car service to other points over a period of time. One of these, on the Highlands car line, was chosen because of its facilities for parking the car without any additional expense. This stop will serve a polling division which has 1,427 names on the voters list, and the eastern portion of the polling division with approximately 800 voters.

EXTENSION SLOW

Hugh C. Gourlay pointed out that extension of the service will necessarily be slow as the library is operating on a limited budget.

Miss Green MacDonald, former member of the library staff was granted six months leave of absence to enable her to accept a position with the Toronto Public Library. The board members felt that in view of the experience she would gain in being able to accept of increased value when she returned to the Edmonton staff.

A letter was received from Miss Roberta Kiefer of Peterboro, Ont., formerly part work secretary of the Edmonton Y.W.C.A., expressing appreciation and offering con-

Italians, Captured By Nazis, Drowned

LONDON, Oct. 26.—CP—Hundreds of Italian soldiers, captured by the Germans on islands in the Aegean Sea, drowned after the foundering of a ship transporting them to the Italian mainland, the Berlin radio claimed yesterday. The broadcast asserted that seven British bombers attacked German rescue boats and seaplanes and strangled the Italians.

On the report of the finance committee bills amounting to $1,125.27 were recommended for payment.

The librarian's statistical report showed that 57,144 books were distributed during the month of September as compared with 48,139 in the same month last year.

The increasing popularity of the medical programs was shown in the attendance figures for the month of September which totalled 1,328.

The matter was brought before the board by the chairman of the Child Welfare Division of the Council of Social Agencies, Mrs. A. G. McCalla, spokesman for the delegation requested that the board conduct an inquiry to find how many children were in need of supervised care.

The Child Welfare committee was formed at the request of a number of citizens who were interested in the problem of child care now aggravated by wartime conditions. The committee reported it had found that the most successful service rendered in other centres regarding this problem was that supplied under the Dominion-provincial agreement whereby the Dominion and the province shared the financial burden.

The service would provide supervised care after school hours and on Saturdays and holidays and where necessary, food would be served at noon and in the evening. Mrs. McCalla told the board that employers in the city were interested in the scheme as they felt many more mothers would volunteer for part-time jobs if their fell were their children were being properly supervised and looked after.

PLAY POPPY SALES

A request from the Canadian Legion for permission to sell poppies in the hotel rooms during the Poppy Day campaign was granted by the board.

On a report from the finance committee the recommendation was approved by the board to invest $60,000 of various surplus and reserve funds in Canada's Fifth Victory Loan.

As instructed by the board at a previous meeting the superintendent submitted a report giving the names of women teachers who have resigned, been married and have done substitute teaching since June 24th.

Notice of motion rescinding the standing resolution regarding the status of teachers who continue to teach after being married was presented to the board. A new motion amending the previous one was laid on the table for further discussion at the next meeting.

Dr. G. E. Swallow, medical inspector of schools presented a committee report of medical examinations and care given children during the months of June and July. Also the report of medical examination from January to July 1943.

EXAMINATIONS GIVEN

During the period a total of 2,556 physical examinations were given pupils and 6,587 medical examinations. Pupils having defective teeth were 1,065 and 2,271 were inoculated against diphtheria.

During the months of June and July there were 145 complete physical examinations given and 464 complete physical examinations of pre-school children.

DOROTHY DIX SAYS—

Mother Cannot Ask Child To Give Up Whole Life

Such a Parent May Get Nothing in Holding to Hope Of Reward for Sacrifices; Children Must Live Own Lives

A mother writes: "How true is the old saying that when our children are little they grow on our feet, but when they are grown they tread on our hearts. We spend our lives caring for them, working them, sacrificing ourselves for them, thinking we will be repaid by their love and appreciation of all we have done for them, but when they get old enough to be a comfort to us they go about their own affairs and leave us lonely and desolate."

"Why, any pretty little flower can take a boy away from the mother who bore him and who has loved to make him what he is. The girl you have worked your fingers to the bone to keep soft and comfortable will get up and follow the lad who whistles to her, without ever giving a thought to the mother she is leaving behind her."

"I tell you any mother who expects gratitude from her children is due for a bitter disappointment. Look at my case. My husband died leaving me with two small sons and not a dollar. Fortunately, I had been a competent secretary, so I was able to get a good job by which I could support myself and keep our home together. For twenty years I tilled day and night, and both mother and father to them and to give them a happy and carefree childhood."

SACRIFICED FOR CHILDREN

"No matter how tired I was after a long and grueling day in the office, I would cook them good meals, and wash and mend and press their clothes and make them comfortable. For my sacrifices they might not be ashamed before the other children at school. I wore my old coat that they might have the kind of sweaters other boys had. I would move all social recreation so that I might always be with them in the evenings. I refused a fine man who wanted to marry me and who could have given me the life I wanted. I would not risk putting a step-father over them."

"It was a long, hard grind for me, but I buoyed myself up with the dream of the reward I would get when my boys were grown, and they would cherish me as I had cherished them, and we would live together and I would have nothing to do but make a home for them. Well, the boys grew up and they were all that any mother's heart could wish. They graduated with honor from their university and stepped into fine positions. They were devoted to me, and I had the little home and I kept house for them and for three years the dream came true."

"Then what do you think happened? My older son got married and the younger one is engaged, and the dream went into the scrap heap along with all the other Castles in Spain that foolish mothers build for their children."

"Oh, there isn't anything to mother with my son's wife, nor with the girl the other boy is engaged to."

THE STORY: Capt. Raymond Imhof, G-4, U.S. Army Intelligence, has been assigned to follow the trail of a German spy, who has been unable to bring out of Germany the plans for which Imhof was forced down. He discovers the plot to a girl. They make their way toward Coblenz.

CHAPTER XII

IMHOF turned east toward New Coblenz and the store there. Imhof halted at the sight of a great fan of red glass ahead beneath a pillaring tower of smoke.

The first encounter with people came at an air-raid post farther along. Pat drew closer to Imhof. It was her first sight of Nazis in their lair. No one paid Imhof or herself the least attention.

Soon civilians began to appear in the streets, singly or in small groups—stunned, dazed people who had endured, when they spoke it was in hushed, strained voices. They looked at Pat and Imhof with dull, uninquiring eyes.

Evidence of the R.A.F.'s work multiplied swiftly; buildings blasted or collapsed, fires of greater or less intensity and size, burning un-fought, even unwatched.

This was devastation, and for Pat and Imhof the going became slow and hard. Time and again they had to backtrack, to by-pass blocked streets or to pick a way around great bomb craters, over piles of debris, under tottering walls or between raging fires.

Imhof became anxious. Time was precious. He was wasting it looking for either in Old Coblenz. He turned right and headed for New Coblenz, trying the pace ruthlessly till Pat, out of breath, was almost tired to keep up. At length, and quite without warning, they reached a part that the bombs had straddled.

"Cloney!" Imhof panted. "Bit of the shopping district spared. Watch out for a clothing store."

They went more slowly, scanning the building fronts, when Imhof pointed ahead. "Across the street. One of the biggest."

"Watch out!" Pat hissed. "People coming."

Imhof checked from crossing and walked on.

"Anti-looting patrol!" he cursed under his breath.

Pat pulled up a shade behind Imhof to help her pulled uniform pass muster in the dark.

"Where are you going?" The demand was curt. Imhof promptly named a street in the residential quarter off the Rhine Promenade.

"Where did you come from?" Suspicious eyes bored into them. "Casanovafrase."

The suspicious eyes still bored into them. At last, "Keep going!" came the significant warning.

Crossing over, they returned to a side street they had passed after greeting the patrol. After a careful look up and down they followed it for half a block to the rear of the last street.

Stocks were scant and of poor quality. Imhof pointed hopefully at a display model where he moved forward to keep watch.

Pat laughed. "Something a little more practical, Ray," she said, not unmoved. His effort was a loss.

"Halt," he called, quickly. He was a dark dress of eras wool with a short jacket to match. She measured them against her person for fit. Further forging provided a cloth Jaeger hat of make-believe wool and a raincoat. Retiring with her booty to a dressing room, she made a rapid change.

"Better grab some spares," whispered Imhof from the store front. "Free shopping spree are rare."

Pat hastily collected some handkerchiefs and a pair of stockings. Suddenly, a half dozen swift, soundless strides Imhof led her to her side. He pulled her down behind a counter, himself ducking at the same instant.

"Someone coming!" he warned, palming an automatic.

Their eyes level with the counter top, they watched a shape frame itself in one of the front windows. The intruder carried no rifle, and Imhof breathed easier. The newcomer, it was clear, was also on looting bent.

After a hasty look up and down the street outside the man stole in and began hastily gathering an indiscriminate pile of garments. At first he would pause apprehensively now and then, but he soon became absorbed.

"Come out of there!" rang a harsh command from the street.

In a panic the looter whirled and dived for the back of the store. A rifle cracked and he crumpled up under the window that had betrayed him to the patrol, two of whose number now entered, passing Pat and Imhof where they crunched behind their counter.

"Toll!" pronounced one, bending over the body. "Toll!" he called loudly to the pair in the street. "Good shot, Ernst. Drilled him right through the back of the head. What do we do with him?"

"Leave him here," came the answer. "Any others in there?"

Imhof heard Pat's swift intake of breath as she clutched his arm. He himself tensed, readying his automatic.

"Look, he was alone I tell you," was the grumbled objection. "I saw him sneak in."

"Do as I tell you," Pat, with pounding pulses, heard them moving about, torches flashing, now near, now farther off, now near again—and yet nearer. A light swept along the counter top, down the wall behind them.

CHOLECYSTITIS

This massive word means "inflammation of the gall bladder" and the inflammation may be of an acute or chronic type.

Many theories have been expounded as to the cause of this condition, which often occurs in those over the age of forty who have spent years in building up a toxic state of the body through faulty living and eating habits. Women are more affected than men but in both sexes the patient will usually be of the obese type, following a sedentary occupation, and not fond of exercise.

Over-eating plays an important part in the cause of cholecystitis especially overindulgence in sweets and candies. Avoidance of active exercises either in work or in play plus the heavy indulgence in food increases the obesity and favors a sluggish gall bladder. Due to the fact that the symptoms may vary in different people the condition may exist for years without having been properly diagnosed. The patient thinking that he has stomach trouble, or the more serious, may simulate gall stone colic, without the existence of any stone whatever.

A gradual inflammation of the gall bladder may produce an obstruction, causing biliary colic, but there is usually pain to a greater or lesser degree in the upper right side of the abdomen. This may be a dull ache which may last a few hours or even days, and there is often digestive disturbance, loss of appetite, gas and belching, nausea and sometimes vomiting, which may give relief. Quite often the patient will believe that the attack was brought on by having eaten something which did not agree with him, whereas the condition actually lies in the gall bladder itself. The acute form may be mistaken for appendicitis, the symptoms and pains often resembling each other. Chronic inflammation of the gall bladder when not caused by gall stones, responds splendidly to dietary treatment.

The first step followed by a curative diet soon clears the condition up, but a change in the habits of living must take place in order to gain lasting results. Graduated exercises, especially those which strengthen the abdominal muscles and the abdominal organs, should be performed daily and strict sufferers are cautioned, care should be taken to see that the elimination is well regulated. This may be accompanied by the use of the warm water enema, and irritating drugs designed to stimulate the flow of the bile should be avoided, since they act as a whip on an already tired organ.

The acute type is best treated by rest in bed, but it should be borne in mind that only by an X-Ray of the gall bladder is it possible to determine whether the patient has gall stones, which may be the cause of the inflammation.

All questions regarding health and diet will be answered. Large, stamped, self-addressed envelope must be enclosed. Write on one side of paper only. Letters must not exceed 150 words. Address: McCoy Health Service, The McCoy Building, 1151 West 8th Street, Los Angeles, Calif.
